It's all systems go for 53rd Art in the Park

Art in the Park is one of a handful of selling exhibitions where buyers and the public are able to rub shoulders with the artists in an impossibly romantic atmosphere, aided by the autumnal splendour of fallen leaves, roaring fires, sherry at night, and a delightfully diverse programme of music and entertainment.

The is part of the event mix of the city and contributes hugely to the Winter rush that Pietermaritzburg always experienced at this time of the year with Comrades Marathon and Royal show also happening at this same time.

In addition to emerging artists component introduced in 2002, last year saw an introduction of top end craft products supported by the KZN Department of Art & Culture to expose emerging artists to a broader audience.

A school art competition called 'through the eye of a child' where school kids will be draw a representation of an anti-xenophobia message will be part of the Art in the Park this year.

Like previous editions, visitors to the 2015 exhibition can look forward to a rich tapestry of mediums, ranging from all painting mediums to photography, glassworks, paintings in sand and now selected craft pieces. A stringent selection policy and a focus on quality art help to define the success of Art in the Park
